Maria is 93 years old and lives alone in her small flat in Barcelona, where time doesn't seem to go by in the past 50 years. She has her tricks there: steps, hooks, and lamps, to make it less noticeable as she can't stretch her arms too much or see with clarity as she used to do. Her only contact with the outer world is the weekly call from her childhood friend, Pilar. The truth is she has fewer and fewer friends from her generation, and it's hard to keep up with the routines, but what's ever harder is that it's obvious that nobody needs her. Every day means a little fight, but Maria has already fought a lot during her life and she's not going to give up easily now.
