London, 1936. Journalist Archie Johnstone is expelled from the newspaper where he worked to denounce British neutrality against fascism. Nancy, his young wife, takes him to start a new life in a place still unknown, virgin and paradisiacal: the Catalan Costa Brava. She has bought a hotel, which will soon be full of clients, intellectuals and bohemians, mixing with the people of the town, until the Spanish Civil War restores the couple's small paradise.

Archie will feel compelled to return to journalism to denounce in the world what is happening in Spain, and Nancy, who will refuse to return to England and shun danger, will have to convert her hotel and, finally, her life as well.
